PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

Believe it or not, I'm writing this column this month without being embarrassed by my close friend Jim Jones.

It seems that every time mother nature rears her mean streak, it's pointed only at you. Well believe it or not, I think everyone within a 500 mile radius of where I write this letter, is in the same condition. So grin and bare it, it could be worse.

Unfortunately it seems the world in which we live, becomes more and more complex. We on the Board of Directors have had to take necessary measures to protect this association, along with those we ask to serve as officers every year. We have been advised by council that in order to do this we must become incorporated. For this to happen we have to ask our membership for a vote to change our by-law structure. Corky Knoll and his committee have worked endlessly on this project since it's inception. We are asking for your utmost cooperation in this matter, for with it we won't exist.

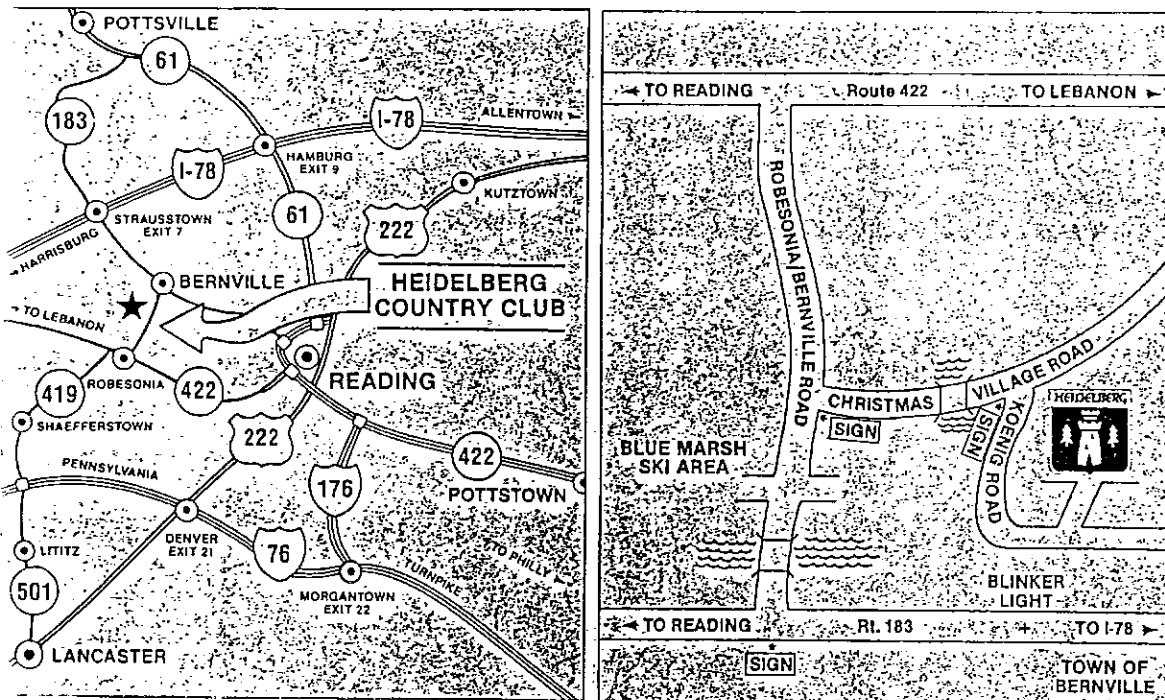

There has been a letter sent to all our voting members concerning this issue. For those of you who may have concerns, please don't hesitate to contact myself or any other director.

Well I hope that everybody has a much better spring and summer than what you have had thus far.

Hope to see you at Heidelberg Country Club.

ALLIED REPORT

By Sam Snyder

At the last Allied GCS of PA Board of Directors meeting the following topics were discussed:

Nutrient Management - This legislation has passed the House and is currently in committee in the Senate. It is expected to pass and become law in the near future. The golf course industry will not be impacted immediately but in two years DER will propose regulations for all other "non point" pollution sources, i.e. golf courses. The Allied plans to meet with DER officials to present the golf course point of view and the research behind the golf course industry's positive impact on the environment.

Water Management - This legislation will revoke all prior legislation regarding water use in the state. Fees and restrictions are probable. This bill doesn't specifically address golf turf but like the previous legislation, the DER will assess the use of water and propose regulations which will effect us. The Allied plans to meet with DER officials to present the unique needs of golf turf.

A letter from Jered Golden, President of Philadelphia AGCS, was presented. The subject was the use of the PTC turfgrass survey through the Allied to cover the state and have individuals meet with their Representatives and Senators on their home "turf" to discuss the concerns of the golf turf industry. The Allied agreed and will help with the advancement of this project.

Government Relations representative, Bill Brubaker also mentioned the need for the Allied to have each local member maintain contact with their legislators to provide name and face recognition when the "big issues" hit the industry.

The 1993 dues are coming in but many local members haven't sent their's in yet. Each local should promote the Allied at least through their newsletter. The local associations have face to face contact and must promote the Allied when possible.

AUDUBON COOPERATIVE SANCTUARY PROGRAM

by Tony Goodley, CGCS
Vice President, CPGCSA

It is difficult to pick up any magazine or newspaper these days without an environmental issue pointing a finger at someone in the Green Industry. I do not think it is any secret that the general public views golf courses as a place where too many fertilizers and pesticides are applied.

I am not really telling any of you something you don't already know, but our image as Turf Managers as viewed by the average citizen is somewhat distorted from an environmental point of view for the simple reason they just don't know what goes on in our business of applying chemicals.

So what do we do? One of the answers I have found has been very painless, as a matter of fact extremely rewarding. Our golf course has joined the Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary Program for golf courses. It is an organization that is sponsored in part by the USGA and is administered by the Audubon Society of New York State. The program encourages you to enhance the habitat of wildlife through "Wildlife Encouragement Programs", and to protect and preserve natural resources for the benefit of your golf courses as well as your community.

The program will send you educational information that provides details of various wildlife projects. I have found many of these to be a lot of fun and extremely rewarding, and it can do nothing but help the image of the golf courses as good environmental neighbors. All projects and decisions concerning the program are at the decision of the course superintendent so no one will be telling you what you can or can not do. You can take this program as far as you like even to the point of certification in Integrated Pest Management.

Gentleman this is the direction the industry is headed and the sooner we get on the band wagon the better. If you would like information on the program please write me at Heritage Hills Golf Resort, 2700 Mount Rose Avenue, York, PA 17402 or call (717) 755-4653.

FROM THE EDITOR:

We all know what kind of spring this has been trying to get caught up after the past couple of difficult months. Trying to stay focused on the big picture when the day never seems to end can sometimes be a problem.

For many reasons, this person very much included, we sometimes isolate ourselves at work and never look outside the lines. This leads to poor productivity and poor work habits. We all need to step away from our golf courses and experience the outside world. Whether its going to a ball game or dinner out with the family, anything to break the routine can be good. Also, spending a day at a Central meeting can give you some new ideas and a way to share yours with fellow colleagues!

Anyway, hang in there, better days are comings.

ON THE POSITIVE SIDE

By Michael Prest, Assistant Superintendent
West Shore Country Club

Don't you just love this time of year? We're all refreshed from a winter of lounging around. Spring has officially arrived! The sun is shining, birds are chirping, flowers are blooming and everything else is greening up nicely. All our aerification is completed, the greens are rolling about "9" on our beloved Stimpmeter and golfers are congratulating us already for what they know will be another successful season. Is this a great business or what??!

Let's get back to reality. The only hole punching we've accomplished is our office wall after hearing the latest 5-day forecast, our greens are lucky to stimp at "6" and virtually every golfer wants to know when the heck we're going to mow the rough and what's that darn pond doing in the middle of the twelfth fairway?

Hard to believe, I know, but things could be worse: our courses aren't 20 miles downstream (yet), we're not laying in the hospital as a result of a temperamental 60-foot spruce that did not want to come down (that happened to me but that's another story) and no cult fanatics have taken over our turf.

Things aren't great, but we're professionals. We've handled everything else Mother Nature has thrown at us in the past from Hurricanes to that dusty drought of only a few years back. We will get through these trying and soggy times.

When the work load seems unbearable... prioritize! Get the things done first that absolutely, positively have to get done. Eventually, everything else will get accomplished. Even if it doesn't, the world will go on. Worrying about it will get you nothing, except possibly a few wrinkles and maybe an ulcer or two.

Look on the bright side! Think of how few golfers we've seen this spring. That's not all bad. I confidently predict the sun will shine again for more than one day in a row, the golf course will dry out and someday we'll all play par golf. Well, two out of three ain't bad.

Don't forget to save some time for the truly important things in your life: yourself, your family and maybe even a few rounds of golf!

Placements Pin Onus on Cup Cutters

By James Achenbach,
from Golf Course News

Many golfers believe there is a rule that prohibits pins from being closer than 15 feet, or perhaps 12 feet, from the edge of the green.

Guess again.

There is no rule that specifies the distance of a hole from the collar of the green. It can be five feet from the fringe if that's what a tournament committee wishes to do.

Which brings us to the Masters.

"There were some pins I had never seen before," said Ray Floyd. "There were some pins that were barely on the green. I guess that's all right -- they were on the green."

To spectators, some of the cups at Augusta National appeared to be less than 10 feet from fringe. The daily pin sheets, distributed to players and caddies, listed the closest pin at four paces. One pace is the equivalent of one yard, meaning that 12 feet was the minimum distance.

Floyd said he thought some of the placements were closer to the edge.

Four paces is the unofficial worldwide standard when it comes to minimum distance. The PGA Tour uses it. The USGA uses it.

"It is our unwritten benchmark," said Mike Tate, who works for the European Tour and is director of the 1993 Ryder Cup. "We would never put it three paces.

But would the Masters?

The cup and tee marker placement committee at Augusta National is composed of six club members and a single nonmember. One of the six members is Hall Thompson, founder of Shoal Creek outside Birmingham, Ala. The nonmember is former U.S. Open and PGA champion David Graham.

Graham replaced longtime committee member Jay Hebert this year. Hebert, also a former PGA champion, left the committee because of health problems.

Committee members don't like to talk about how they select pin placements, yet the entire committee was spotted early Saturday morning on the seventh green, meticulously picking the appropriate spot.

"It is done on a daily basis," said Graham. "There are no cast-in-cement rules. The pin placements are selected by a committee of gentlemen, some of which have been doing it for 40 years."

Graham refused to talk about how he was chosen, and he didn't wish to elaborate on his duties. "I consider it an honor," he said, "It is one of the highest compliments I could ever receive.
